H. S. CALLENDER Clerk.

LONDON, — Dec. 16.
Yesterday, a gentleman of the name of Locke addressed the General Court of Bank Proprietors, and gave notice, that he should move at the next court in March, for an account of the Company's affairs to be laid before them. It is strange that such accounts should require a question, as the 12th bye-law directs, that the state and condition of the Company should be laid before the Proprietors at every dividend court; whereas no such state or condition is ever noticed at these courts at all. It is a general opinion the Bank can divide ten per cent.
The state of their accounts will determine it.

Independent of foreigners and females, there are upwards of fifteen hundred Bank Proprietors, among whom may be found the wealthieft men in the kingdom : fo that the next General Court in March, in which accounts are to be called for, will probably be the fullest Court that has met for a number of

He is the first dancer in the world. He plays upon seven instruments of music, beyond any other individual. He speaks twenty six languages, and maintains public theses in each. He walks round the various circles of human science like the master of each; and, strange to be mentioned to white men, this Mr George is a Molatto, the fon of an African mother.

There are in the Cabinet of the late Sir John Elliot, a few exquisite drawings, which are valued at no less than 500 l. These, which his uncle has refused the bequest under the conditions annexed, will probably come under the hammer, and cause many a squabble among the amateurs.

Amidithe great number of bankrupts and failures in this city, we have much pleasure in being informed a wholefale linen draper, near Cheapside, who failed for thirty-four thousand pounds, being his part in a considerable house, and of which he has paid but eleven shillings in the pound, having lately inherited from his deceased brother seventy thoufand pounds, has given notice to his creditors to call for the remaining nine shillings in the pound; and also to charge him interest for the same!

A letter from an English gentleman at Madeira has the following article:—The Captain of an Amas the following article:—The Captain of an American veffel, who is arrived here from Bofton, has given us the most pleasing piece of intelligence we have had for some years. He says, that he was chaced by two large Algerine galleys some time; that they fired several shot at him to bring him to; that he certainly should have been taken, had they not met with the following accident: - Being eager to feize their prey, they crowded all the fail they could, and also made use of their oars; when, in their hurry, they run upon a rock, and foon went to pieces, and both crews were drowned. Thefe to pieces, and both crews were around fithere, to two gallies had taken up their station off here, to intercept all vessels that were bound hither. piece of intelligence gave great joy to all ranks of people; feveral of their bodies have been thrown on shore, which were buried in the sands, after being ftripped of their ornaments.
The dreadful high wind on Wednesday night has proved exceeding faral to the shipping below bridge; whole tiers were driven from their moorings, and it is supposed that above two hundred fail have ran foul of each other, and received confiderable damage. A great number of craft have likewise been funk at their moorings, and many other miffing. Perhaps, in the memory of man, fo much havock has not happened in fo short a time.

"The riotous spirit has met a severe check, which will give a severe wound to the knavish system; the hands of lawful government will be strengthaned; it will give a spur to the milital; and each side will now know their own strength and weakness. Our General Sollivan behaved with great prudence, mildness, sirmness, and dispatch; and success crowned his exertions. Gen. Ceilly distinguished himself by rushing sword-in-hand among the rioters, and pulling them out as a butcher would seize sheep in a slock. Several other continental officers and soldiers did eminent service. The rabbles were struck with a panic at the sight of the light horse, and the very name of artillery. They sted over senses into the woods, and scattered in all directions."

It is faid with confidence, That it is not the Minister's intention to make an alteration in the French Commercial Treaty, respecting the Rights of the City of London to the package, falvage, and bailiage, which are annihilated by the treaty; but that it is in meditation to give to the city a compen fation for the fame.

In this case a question arties, whether the citizens can dispose of a franchise which they received from their fathers, and are bound to transmit to polleging

The present Commercial Treaty between Great Britain and France will produce a mutual advantage to both countries, by abridging the enormous body of Excise and Custom-house officers - The corps of brigades, in France, appointed to protect

There is in the fecond fection of the new " act for appointing Commissioners to enquire into the state and condition of the woods, forells, and land revenues, belonging to the Crown," one of the most extraordinary delegations of power that the annals of Parliament can produce. This pallage is couched in the following terms :

" And, for the better execution of this act, be it further snacked, that the faid Commissioners shall have power to meet and fit, from time to time, in fuch place or places as they fall find convenient, with or withous adjournment; and to fend their pre-cept, or precepts, u nder their hands and feals, for fuch witnesses as they shall think necessary to examine, for the better discovery and finding out of the matters or things by this act directed to be enquired and examined into by them, and to examine fuch witneffes, upon oath, touching and concerning fuch discovery and disclosure."

The Commissioners, from the above paragraph-have an authority to hold a Court in Cornwall, and furmion all the nobility and genery of Northumberland to attend them, and to take examinations upon loath. That fo wanton an exercise of power is to be apprehended, is not contended for ; but the authority is undoubtedly given. And the recomof the Commilioners.

This morning Michael Walker, alias Irish Myke, Richard Payne, alias James Davis, and Robert Cox, a boy about fifteen, convicted on Friday last at the Old Bailey, for the wilful murder of Mr Duncan Robertson, near Smart's Buildings, High Holborn, were executed on a gibbet erected near the fpet where the horrid fact was committed. They were taken from Newgate in a cart about eight o'-

The cries and lamentations of the boy were inceffant, and so loud as to be heard at a great di-stance: he frequently exclaimed, "The Lord have riercy on my soul! Christ receive my soul!" The cart drew from under the gallows about nine, and after hanging an hour, the bodies were taken to Surgeon's Hall for diffection.

On this occasion a great concourse of people at-tended, perhaps not less than five thousand; and so acrocious was the guilt of the milerable fufferers, that while in the agonies of death they were but little commiserated by the numerous spectators.

EDINBURGH.

Extrast of a letter from London, Dec. 18. "The opinion fome time fince formed, respecting the unfinished state of the commercial treaty with the Court of France, is now confirmed beyond a doubt, by the fudden and unexpected return of Mr Eden to the Court of France, with more errors, defects, and blunders in the commercial treaty than it will, perhaps, be possible to have rectified and remoxed before the day appointed for the meeting of Parliament. Not to make any farther observation, at this time, on the Minister and his Plempo, what will the French Minister think of Mr Eden, when he tells him, among other things, that, when he confented to the article that does away the greatest part of the rights and property of the city of Lon-don, neither he nor Mr Pitt were sensible of what they were doing, but wholly ignorant thereof?

In the bill which the Magistrates mean to petition Parliament for leave to bring in at their next meet ing, we are informed, it is intended to crave liberty to be allowed to borrow 25,000l. upon the fhoredues of Leith, for the purpose of enlarging and deepening the harbour. Application, it is faid, will alfo be made in the fame bill for powers to take down part of Milne's Square, in order to widen the fouth entry to the North Bridge. And as the city has been to much extended of late years, it is likewife proposed to apply for powers to increase the number of the City Guard, that useful body of men, who, from the circumstance above mentioned, are found inadequate to give fufficient protection to both Old and New Powner and the inhabitants of the Southern Districts, a still greater extension of which will accommand take place, in confequence of the South Bridge, which is now happily brought to a degree of forwardness, that reflects the highest honour on the Traffees, and upon every, perfor employed under them, in the execution of this most beneficial undertaking.

We hear that the business at Leith is encueased fo much of late, that the porters and carters and employed are not fafficient to load and anload The An additional number of these nseful people are therefore as much wanted at Leith as an enlargement of the harbour.

On Tuefday last, as feveral carts with their drie vers were coming towards Edinburgh, five miles from Haddington, they were come up to by the Mail Coach. The guard founded his horn as a figual for their clearing the way; instead of which, knowing their -krength and number, they immediately completely blocked up the road, by giving their carrs a zig-zag direction, some taking the right, some the left, and some still keeping the middle. The guard by this time was near enough to defire they would halve the road. Their answer was only a contemptuous laugh; and the paffengers defiring him to alight and do his duty, by taking the number of the carts, he got down with his blunderbus in his hand; and going to one of the carts, on the flufts of which a carter fat, the fellow directly jumped down, and beat him to the ground. The just however, getting up, fruck the garter wish theired of his blunderbuls, but was again beat down this time a paffenger, Mr Halker, had left the guard, which he presented with force french as threats, by forcing it from both. By this time the remainder of the carters came up, and a feufile enfued between the coachman and guard on one fide, and the carters on the other, in which the fervants of government were very ill used, much hurt, and sessioneral times beat to the ground; so that had not the gentlemen interfered, who by this time had returne ed from the carts, where they had been to take the name of the owner, the numbers, &c. the cast of ftrophe, in all probability, would have been fatal. Too much praise cannot be given to the guard, who twice beat down with the instrument of death in his hand, never offered to level at his adverfary, Then gentlemen who were paffengers, are determined to fee examples made of these careers for the good of future travellers.

We understand the above affair is taken up int very ferious manner by the Postmaster General of this city, who, for the protection of property and the benefit of the public, is refolved to hold the offenders up as an example.

We hear, there was a meeting on Monday laft. at Dunbar, of the feveral contractors of our mail coach; and that, amongst many other refolutions for amendments and conveniency of paffengers, it was refolved, that there should be only three coachmen. employed in conducting this coach from Edinburgh to Newcastle; by which means, being constantly on the road, they will be perfectly acquainted with any trifling impediments, and at the fame time much blige their customers. As many passengers bayelor, years expressed a dislike, at being perpetually, at the end of every stage, teased for vails, such alterations and attentions cannot fail to meet with probation. This is exactly the mode of travelling on the principal roads in the fouth. Yesterday morning, about three o'clock, an alarm was given of a fire having broke out in a house on the North Bridge. The City Guard immediately gave their attendance, and found it to be in one of the garret-rooms, on the west side of the bridge, above the shop of Mess. Corrie and Sutherland, mufic-fellers to her Majesty. Though the fire had got to some length before any notice was taken of yet, by the activity and fairited exertions of the City Guard, it was happily got under without for ther affiftance, or alarming any of the inhabitants, except the immediate neighbourhood where the fire broke out.

We hear, that upon Monday last, the Directors of the Edinburgh Friendly Infurance Office, defired their Cashier to pay Twenty-two Guincas, to be destributed in the following manner - Twelve Guineas to be distributed among the workmen who were active in extinguishing the late great fire ad-joining to the Parliament House, and Ten Guineas to be distributed among the foldiers of the 56th regiment, pi Yesterd here, and tenfenefs. ranheir's at eight day, at ten ham Melv for return the city, b Friday

Friday se'ennight, thirteen ploughs were set to work upon a field at Newton, to compete for the premiums given by the Dalkeith society of Farmers, for the three best plowed ridges by Ploughmen, from the parishes of Newton, Dalkeith, and Cranfton. They performed their work greatly to the forisfaction of a number of Gentlemen and Farmers, when the first Premium was adjudged to John Chri-ftie, servant to Mr William Hope farmer in Newton; the fecond to William Ruffel, fervant to Mr James Hope farmer at Newton; and the third to Mungo Clerk, fervant to Mr William Laing, farmer in Craigour. On the 15th inftant, a competition took place, on the farm of Braid, for the premiums distributed to men which should appear from the pariches of West Kirk and Cramond; this being the fixth and last district coancided with the Dalkeith Society, which is to compete this feafon.

Twenty ploughs appeared, and each man took his flation by lot on a lee field. Each of them ploughed one ridge, which was gathered.

Sir William Dick, Baronet, with some other gentlemen, were present, and a great number of farmers; to whom the performance of the ploughmen afforded much farisfaction. Three judges were previously appointed, unconnected with this district. of them from different parifhes, who did not appear on the field till the ploughs were all gone. They adjudged the prizes as follow: - The first to William Thomson, servant to Mr Punton, farmer at Balgreen; the second to James King, likewise servant to Mr Punton; and the third to John Nimmo, fervant to Mr Robertson farmer in Plewlands.

The farmers present collected fifteen shillings, which they gave in five prizes, five shillings being the highest, to be won by those who should draw the straightest furrows. A pole was fixed on one fide of a flat lying field, and each ploughman again took his flation by lot, at the diffance of about two handred and fifty yards, being placed about fix yards distant from each other. Every one in turn flarted for the pole. The prizes, by the fame jud-ges, were given as follows: — The first to John Nimmo, servant to Mr Robertson farmer in Plewlands; the second to William Thomson, fervant to Mr Punton farmer Balgreen; the third to Andrew Toward, servant to Mr Bryden, farmer in Braid; the fourth to Thomas Reid, fervant to Mr Gray, farmer in Gorgiemuir; and the fifth to James Lowden, fervant to Mrs Scott farmer, Myrefide.

We hear that the Provoit and Magistrates of Wick, the county town of Crithnels, after the example of the other northern Burghs, having taken into consideration the expediency of an union of the Aberdeen Colleges, and having attentively perufed wing papers, viz the Outlines of the Plan of Union, the partial of fome Professor of King's College, the Reply to Memorial, and the Defence of the conduct of the wardchal College, were pleased warmingually to appropriate of facts and I were pleased unanimously to approve of such an Union, as a measure which, in their opinion, "would tend greatly to the advancement of literature and science in the northern parts of Scotland." Would other public focieties, who think themselves interested in this matter, carefully peruse all the printed papers on both fides, before coming to any refolution on the subject, it is believed that there could not be any confiderable difference of opinion among them. We are informed, that the Prefbytery of Uift, having maturely considered the projected Union of the King's and Marischal Colleges, and impurially weighed the arguments on both sides of the question, did, at their meeting in October last, unanimously disapprove of the said Union upon the plan now

After the rafeal went off, the boy told the gentleman, that after walking with him about a mile, he afked where he was going, if he had any money, and if he had a knife; that he demanded his money, knife sad a knife; that he demanded his money, knife floes, &c. otherwise he would cut his throat, which induced him to cry our murder. Being composed of such inflammable materials, it is impossible to describe the violence of the fire. Endeavours were used to represent the flames, but the application of water, and even earth, was found in vain, as the rofin, oil and turpentine, floated near a foot deep on the ground. Happily the stores have no connection with any other buildings, and however one quarter may fuser, it is a consolation that the fire had no communication of further mischief.

fuggestions are addressed to you.

The new Form, it is not to be doubted, from the judgment with which it is compiled, and the improvements which it contains, will be approved of,
as it highly deferves to be, in your general return.
There are no doubt fome additions and alterations, which many of its friends upon both fides of the Church, (it being no matter of party), think advife-able to be made, although, at the fame time, it is expressly admitted, that there can be reason on that account to difapprove of the overture in general; for even is the prefent state, and without a single amendment, no person could be state in adopting it, instead of the Form 1707.

A defect pervades the whole article of Penal

Law. It is true, this article was not before the Committee who drew up the form, nor before the Affembly who transmitted it; yet it ought to have been included and revised, for it is a part of the fyffem; and every fyftem, should, as much as possible, be made a whole within itself.

On looking back to your old statutes, you will mark in them, a feverity upon both orders of men-laics as well as ecclefialties. But a change in the lates as well as eccletaties. But a change in the sinuer, and which has not been attended to in the overture, has, fince these statutes were made, taken place, and which would have justified censures more worthy of a liberal and enlightened age.

Church censure is a main point, you are to look to. And you will see, that in the case of ecclesions.

clefialtics, your penal law is an edid sgainst reason itself... For it is absurd, that the same punishment of deposition, should be inslicted in cases attended with every circumstance that can alleviate, and in cases attended with every circumstance that can aggravate guilt. Punishments heavier than the ofthose very interests which they meant to support. And besides, it has long been observed, as unfacturable to the purity of the ministerial character, that there should be no civil punishment, but that which carries with it unrer ruin; for Church Courts, rather than pass that sentence in less heinous cases, are tempted to affoilzie altogether; and thus, he who is comparatively a petry criminal, but at the fame time a real one, escapes without all legal reproach of penalty whatever.

Cut off from your body the heinous and the irreclaimable but punish sins as sins deserve. Let there be degrees in your seale. In your application to Parliament for a compulsator upon wirnelles, include a petition, that the same punishment shall not all who fin.

While you reform the code with respect to eccle-fialtics, remember the laity. The little finger itself of the Church has lain heavy upon the one as well as upon the other class of men. It was not fore-feen, we may believe, that the censures against laics, from certain circumstances which have atthe fact is, that the public appearances required to be made by them, have destroyed modelly, and hardened the heart—have begotten falsehood, perjury, child-murder.

The confure of the greatet excommunication,

(and which is kept alive in the overture before you) reflects deep upon the discipline of a church, formed from the fmall superstitions, yet retaining (although now only on paper) one of the most terrible in Popery. It is a stain upon paper itself; and should be blotted out from your laws.

Patting to other arricles in the Overture, it occurs, that feveral amendments, although in general flight, ought to be made.

These refer to the period of prescription—the leading of precognitions—the peremptory diets—the appeal from inferior courts—the defence of their fentences, &c.

But instead of entering into a discussion upon these points, which would not only encroach upon your time, but be unnecessary in an address to your wisdom; it may be better; to state briefly, the shole proposed amendments upon the Overture in one view; proceeding from page to page; and only adding notes of explanation, where these shall feem to be requifite. ...
